

Organizer Documents

Using the Organizer as a project binder

As you may have noticed in that Add popup, the Organizer also permits rich text documents, as well. In addition, you can actually drag in any sort of document from the Finder or even web links from your browser, to the Organizer.

For Organizer text files, Curio can permit editing. For PDF files, Curio supports annotating. For web links, you can surf within Curio. However other file types, such as Numbers and Pages files, can only be previewed from within Curio. We actually use the Mac's Quick Look system to render the preview so it should support many popular document formats.

Note that the Organizer is simply acting as a binder to collect these documents in your project. These items are not printed, exported, or published with your project's idea spaces. However, you can double-click or right-click on the document item in the Organizer to open, print, or reveal the file in the Finder using the context menu.
